

THE TRUST CASES.

Raleigh Evening Times.

The United States supreme court is expected to hand down decisions in a short time at most. These are the Standard Oil case, the American Tobacco Company case and the Corporation Tax case. Of these three perhaps the most interest centers in the Standard Oil case, though the tobacco company case is similar to it, both being suits for the dissolution of the companies under the provisions of the Sherman anti-trust law.

The case against the Standard Oil Company has been in the courts for more than four years. Suit was filed Nov. 15, 1906, in the United States court for the eastern division of the eastern judicial district of Missouri. It was alleged that the company was conducting business in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law and should be dissolved. J. D. Rockefeller, William Rockefeller, Henry M. Flagler, John D. Archibald, Oliver H. Panyne, H. H. Rogers and C. M. Pratt were named as defendants. The fight has been a big one from the start and every inch of ground has been contested. Various delays were obtained by the trust attorneys and the decree of the decree of the circuit court was not handed down until November 20, 1909. When the decree was announced every stock market in the world was affected. There were big slumps everywhere. The Standard Oil Company immediately appealed the case to the supreme court on a writ of error and arguments were begun March 14, 1910. At the expiration of the spring term Chief Justice Fuller announced that the cases would be assigned for reargument on the fall calendar, owing to the depleted bench, there being two vacancies at the time. Before the time set for reargument arrived Justice Fuller died and Justice Moody resigned, so argument was not finally heard until January, 11, 1911.

The first step of the government against the Tobacco Company was taken in July, 1907. The case has not been in court quite as long as the Standard Oil case, but has been through practically the same steps. Like the Standard Oil case it has been argued twice before the supreme court and for the same reason. The last argument was made January 5.

The Corporation Tax law came into existence as an adjunct to the Payne-Aldrich tariff, the high protectionists throwing out as a sop to the people to offset, if possible, some of the clamor against the new tariff law. Most of the standpatters voted for it in the belief that it would be declared unconstitutional. In the test case, however, its constitutionality was upheld by the lower court and it went to the supreme court on appeal. As a revenue producer it has been a success, having added about $25,000,000 annually to the receipts of the government. The money collected under it is being retained in the treasury, pending the decision of the supreme court.

These three cases are the most important the supreme court has had in years. On the decisions in the first two especially does a great deal hinge. If the government loses it will mean that it has no power to control the great trusts of the country. On the other hand, if it wins the government will have the upper hand and the trusts will be shown that they are not above the law.

A man in Ohio recently sought an expert in oil, because he believed that he had struck oil on his land. He brought a sample in a bottle. Evidently he had hastily grabbed the first bottle at hand; for when the chemist duly analyzed the sample submitted, he sent the following telegraphic report: "Find no trace of oil. You have struck peregrine."—Exchange.

"Not in husbanding of strength, but in yielding it in service; not in burying our talents, but in administering them; not in boarding our seed in the barn, but in scattering it; not in following an earthly human policy, but in surrendering ourselves to the will of God, do we find the safe and blessed path."—F. The automobile lying out of order, the head of the family took the children out in the old family carriage behind a nag that was in need of exercise. When the horse began to snort and cavort the younger boy said, "Pop, you had better shut off the current and fix him. He's missing fire."—Everybody's.

A family moved from a city to a suburban locality, and were told that they should get a watchdog to guard the premises at night. So they bought the largest dog that was for sale in the kennels of a neighbor dog fancier who was a German. Shortly afterwards the house was entered by burglars, who made a good haul, while the big dog slept. The man went to the dog fancier and told him about it. "Well, what you need now," said the dog merchant, "is a leaded dog to wake up the big dog."—Everybody's Magazine.

We have made no New Year resolutions because when we should fall down and brake them our friends would be disappointed and our enemies would cry aloud, "I told you so." We do not expect to be real good in 1911, but we can and we hope to offend as few good in doing men as possible.—Davie Record.

THE CONTENTED MAN

My neighbor's bought a motor car, in which he travels fast and far. I see him turn up mile on mile, and put on forty kinds of style. I also see some folks turn green when gazing at that new machine. But I'm contented just to walk, when I must chase around a block. My soul for splendor never begs—I point with pride to my fat legs. There are no better legs in town; they bear me gaily up and down, through crowded street and quiet lane, and I ne'er revolt, and ne'er complain. I do not have to paint them green, or fill them up with gasoline, or fuss around with wrench and man, to make the blamed things go at all. I do not carry traps in kegs, to make repairs on my fat legs; I do not send them to the shop, because they don't blow up or stop; they do not skid or bust a tire, or leave me standing in the mire. They do not run poor victims down, and mash them up from heels to crown; they do not honk or hiss or toot, to scare some horseman's nervous brute. Year after year they bravely walk, my good fat legs they never balk. I would not trade my trusty limbs for any car that sports and skims beneath its load of idle rich, until it dumps them in the ditch.—Walt Mason in News and Observer.
